WALLA WALLA UNIVERSITY ORCHESTRA
AT CARNEGIE HALL

On June 21, 2019, the Walla Walla University Symphonic Orchestra under the direction of Brandon Beck, is scheduled to perform on the Perelman stage in the Stern Auditorium at Carnegie Hall as a part of the Music Celebrations International “Viennese Masters Orchestra Invitational” concert. They are scheduled to depart on Wednesday, June 19, and return on Sunday, June 23.

On September 4, 2018, Beck sent in a recording of the WWU Symphonic Orchestra performing Tchaikovsky’s Symphony No. 5 from their performance March 17, 2018, as an audition to be accepted to perform in the “Viennese Masters Invitational” concert. About an hour later he received an email officially accepting the group.

This is the 3rd year of the “Viennese Masters Orchestra Invitational” at Carnegie Hall. It is meant to highlight the musical contributions to the orchestra by the many wonderful Viennese composers such as Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven and others. The following, taken from the promotional materials sent by Music Celebrations International explains, “One of the primary mediums through which these composers expressed their musical creativity was the orchestra. Through the early eighteenth century, the orchestra was mostly used as an ensemble to accompany the most popular form of entertainment at the time, the theater, or opera. As European composers gained more prominence and patronage, they were able to seek greater expression in their work – and since the orchestra afforded great power and a variety of timbres, it became the ideal vehicle through which they could express their creativity. Soon, these small theater ensembles expanded thanks to the incredible ingenuity of the many symphonies that Haydn, Mozart, and Beethoven composed.”

There will be four auditioned orchestras featured in this performance at Carnegie Hall. Each group will get a total of 27 minutes for their participation.

If you would like to support the WWU Orchestra to make this experience possible for our students, your tax-deductible donations are accepted at: https://payment.wallawalla.edu/donate/MUSICORCH. Thank you!
