David Thomas, professor of practical theology and apologetics, was born of British parentage not far from Cape Town. His childhood and adolescence were spent in various parts of Africa. In 1971, his whole family emigrated to the east coast of the U.S. where he attended Atlantic Union College, graduating in 1975 with a degree in theology, later going on to earn a doctor of ministry degree from Andrews University. He entered the pastoral ministry serving in several pastorates in New England before moving to College Place where he served as the lead pastor of the Village Church for more than six years. In 2001 he was named dean of the School of Theology, a position he held for 17 years. He currently teaches full time in the School of Theology where he very much enjoys his interaction with students. He is married to Loralee Thomas who teaches at Rogers Adventist School, and he is the father of two sons, both of whom are WWU graduates.

Cheris Brewer Current is a professor in the Wilma Hepker School of Social Work and Sociology. She joined the faculty at Walla Walla University in 2007. She has a B.A. in history from Southern Adventist University and an M.A. and Ph.D. in American studies from Washington State University. Her scholarship and teaching focus on race, immigration, and the maintenance of social inequality. For fun, she is actively engaged in the governance system on campus and with anti-poverty nonprofits in the community. She was recognized in 2017 with the WWU Community Service Award and in 2016 with the President’s Excellence in Advising Award.
